REF: ORLN-21,767, 11 January 1965 1. Attached (for LCPIFIT only) is the photocopy of the document described in Ref. 2. Our efforts to get LCBEFORE to surface this document through Mr. Victor Zorza or other comparable journalists met with unqualified failure. The stumbling block is policy: Until the visit to the U.K. of Brezhnev and Konygin has taken place, LCBEFORE is strictly enjoined against inspiring any strongly anti-Soviet material in the U.K. press. LCBEFORE made it quite clear that they were willing to seek policy clearance for this item, but that they had no chance whatever of success. 3. LCBEFORE continued, in a constructive mood, by pointing out that on the basis of the information contained in Ref and its attachment there was insufficient information to make a story of real journalistic merit. Ref (para 2) stated, for example, that the Soviet press "belatedly and briefly also acknowledged the fire". Without knowing when or where the Soviet press reported the fire, one is hard pressed to make any point at all about Soviet press coverage of the incident. If the Soviet press only got around to referring to the fire in the last month or so, that would be a matter worth noting. Additionally, Ref provided no comments on the trial of Pogrushalsky, such as whether the trial was given any press coverage or when the trial took place or anything of the sort. LCBEFORE also pointed out that the destruction of Ukrainian archival material is a most "un-Russian" sort of activity, and LCBEFORE has strong doubts whether the Soviets in fact deliberately arranged the destruction of these materials. I pointed out that whether the Russians had done this intentionally or not, the object of the story was to highlight Ukrainian nationalist unrest in the face of Soviet efforts to eliminate Ukrainian nationalism and its vestiges. None the less, LCBEFORE pointed out that a great deal of factual information should be added to the highly biased (and questionable) material contained in the document itself. Until these faults were remedied, they felt, it would be quite unlikely that any except a "professional" anti-Communist or Rightist outlet
